- Rank three DIFFERENT areas of research in which you are prepared to work. This provides us with some flexibility in order to maximise your chances of working in an area of choice.
- If you have not yet formed any view of your preferred research, state that you have no preference on the form.

Although you can approach academic staff to discuss possible topics, no commitment can be made until all applications are considered by the Honours Committee. The Honours Committee, in consultation with staff, will make the decision about supervision allocation.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION REQUESTED FROM NON-MACQUARIE STUDENTS APPLYING FOR ENTRY INTO THE PSYCHOLOGY HONOURS YEAR

Under each of the headings below, please demonstrate how you satisfy this requirement --- state which of the second- and third-year unit(s) that you've taken cover that topic. For each of the units that you refer to, you should enclose with your application an outline of it. We do appreciate that each university does things a bit differently, so we're not looking for precise correspondence with our units, but we do need to check off that you've done something in each of these areas of psychology.

Social and Personality Psychology

Developmental Psychology

Biopsychology and Learning

Cognition and Perception

Principles of Psychological Assessment

Two statistics units (largely on ANOVA and regression) (some "research methods" units have substantial statistical content)

A research methods unit (at many universities, the principles and practices of data collection using experimental and other methods are included within the various subject-matter units, rather than being covered in a special-purpose unit, if that is so at your university, please make that clear)

A total (including the above) of about 80% of a full-time year in second-year psychology, and a total of about 80% of a full-time year in third-year psychology
